WELCOMING THE ROMAN MISSAL 3RD EDITION

7. Gradual implementation for Musical Settings.

Though official implementation is set for the First Sunday of Advent 2011, Diocesan bishops may permit the gradual implementation of various musical settings of the people's parts in the Order of Mass starting in September to allow the congregation time to learn them. This applies only to the Glory to God, the Holy, Holy, Holy, and the Memorial Acclamations. Composers have readjusted previous musical settings and new compositions are also being prepared. New musical settings of the Amen and the Lamb of God, the texts of which are not changing, can be introduced at any time.

8. What's not changing. The structure and rite of the Mass itself is not changing, so the Mass will look and feel the same. Some texts of the Mass are not changing, including the Lord's Prayer and the Lamb of God. The translation of Scripture readings used at Mass will remain the same, so those who proclaim the readings (lectors and deacons) will not be affected in their ministry by the introduction of the new Missal. Much of the hymnody and other chants sung at Mass will not be affected by the changes, although many hymnals and other participation aids are being revised to reflect the changes in the parts of the Mass.

9. Symbolism of posture and gestures. The symbolism of some traditional gestures has been recaptured in the new missal. The gestures themselves have always been prescribed, but the introduction of the new Missal provides an opportunity to teach about these long-standing customs. One such example is striking oneself over the chest during the Penitential Act (Confiteor) while reciting the words "through my fault, through my fault, through my most grievous fault," (mea culpa), as a show of remorse, a tradition that had not always been followed in the U.S. Another example is the reverent bow during the recitation of the Creed. After the words "For us men and for our salvation he came down from heaven," at the words that follow up, "and by the Holy Spirit was incarnate of the Virgin Mary, and became man" all bow as a sign of reverence for the mystery of the Incarnation.

OCTOBER IS RESPECT LIFE MONTH

In Wisconsin we have legal tools for communicating our wishes on end-of-life care – these are called Advanced Directives. Advanced Directives are written instructions that you make while you are mentally competent that state how you want your health care decisions to be made if you become incapacitated or can't express your wishes.

There are two different documents you may choose from: 1) Power of Attorney for Health Care and 2) Declaration to Physicians (otherwise known as the Wisconsin Living Will).

1) A Power of Attorney for Health Care lets you name someone to make your health care decisions when you can't. Think carefully about whom you want to serve as your health care agent. Then ask that person to be your "attorney" (agent) for health care – someone you trust. Needless to say, make sure this person is comfortable assuming that responsibility. You should also complete a Power of Attorney for Health Care document which includes a description of your treatment preferences and desires, in order to guide your agent.

The Power of Attorney for Health Care is about medical decisions only. There is another legal document called Durable Power of Attorney which is different and has to do with financial wishes. Power of Attorney for Health Care does not give your agent the ability to make financial decisions for you. For financial purposes you must fill out the document for Durable Power of Attorney

2) The Declaration to Physicians (Wisconsin Living Will) is a set of written instructions that explain your wishes about the medical treatment you'd want if you had a terminal condition or were in a persistent vegetative state. It's an agreement between you and your doctor. You make the decisions, not a family member or friend. You do not appoint anyone to make decisions on your behalf. The Declaration to Physicians Living Will ensures that your end-of-life wishes will be met.

Both forms of Advanced Directives are available on the display table in the Church Vestibule until the end of October.
